Dear _____ :

Your household will not get Food Assistance benefits after _____, unless a member of your household completes a new application, is interviewed again, and gives us all required proof. We've set your interview for _____.

If you miss your interview, you must call and schedule another one. If you are unable to find someone to come in for you, call us at _____ and we will make other arrangements for your interview.

Follow the instructions on the application and mail it or bring it to the Food Assistance office located at: _____.

If you can't mail or bring in the application, someone else can do it for you.

If we get your application with a name, address, and signature by _____, and find that your household is still eligible, you'll continue to get Food Assistance benefits without a break. If we get your application after that date, your benefits may be late.

If additional proof is asked for in the interview, you will be told how soon you must give it to us to continue getting your benefits without a break.

If your Food Assistance benefits are denied after you file an application or you do not think that you are getting the right amount of benefits, you can appeal our decision by asking for a hearing.

Sincerely,

NOTICE: If all members of your household are now receiving Supplemental Security Income (SSI) or plan to apply for SSI, you may reapply for Food Assistance benefits at the social security office instead of filing your application at the Food Assistance office.

If you choose to do this, the social security office must also receive your application by the date shown on the left. They will send it on to the Food Assistance office for recertification processing.
