What is Paternity?

Paternity means fatherhood.

Is the child's biological father automatically the child's legal father?

No. At times the biological father is not automatically the legal father. This happens when the parents of a child were not married when the mother got pregnant, at any time during the pregnancy, or when the child was born. Then paternity must be legally established before the man is considered the legal father.

How is paternity legally established?

Under lowa law there are four ways to establish paternity:

- By marriage. If the parents of a child were married to each other when the mother got pregnant, at any time during the pregnancy, or when the child was born, the husband is assumed to be the father. However, a court can find otherwise.
- By a court or administrative order. If a man denies he is the father, genetic testing may be done.
- When a man states and the mother agrees during a court hearing that he is the father.
- By both parents signing a paternity affidavit.

Why is it important to establish paternity?

Establishing paternity is important because:

- Relationship Children benefit when they have a strong relationship with their dad.
- Identity Both parents' names will be on the baby's birth certificate. Knowing both parents helps the child feel a sense of identity and belonging.
- Medical Your child may inherit a health or medical problem. Getting medical information from both parents may save your child's life.

- Benefits Your child has a right to benefits from both parents. This may include social security, veterans, insurance, inheritance rights, and others. Unless paternity is established, your child may not be able to get these benefits.
- Support Both parents owe their child both financial and emotional support. Even if parents don't live together, a child still needs their support. Child and medical support can make a difference.

What if we want to fill out a paternity affidavit?

BOTH PARENTS MUST SIGN A PATERNITY AFFIDAVIT from the Department of Public Health. You can get this form:

- > At the hospital where your child is born.
- > From the Department of Public Health.
- > From your local Child Support Recovery Unit.
- > From any County Recorder/County Registrar's Office.

You can also return the form to any of these agencies. The agencies will send the form to the Department of Public Health.

The affidavit can be used to establish paternity if:

- The mother was not married to someone else when she got pregnant, during her pregnancy, or when the child was born.
- She was married to someone else during this time, but there is a court order saying her husband is not the father of the child.

Note: The affidavit must be approved by the Department of Public Health.

Not sure about signing a paternity affidavit?

Don't fill out a paternity affidavit if you are not sure who the father is. If you aren't sure, ask for genetic tests. Ask the hospital staff if testing can be done before the mother and child go home. Don't fill out a paternity affidavit if you know the man signing the affidavit is not the biological father of a child. This is because:

- When you fill out an affidavit, you swear that the man listed on the affidavit is the biological father. Giving false information could be considered perjury (punishment for lying).
- When a paternity affidavit is approved, it is like a court order establishing paternity.
- If the wrong person is established as the father, the child and actual father don't get their chance to exercise their rights. They don't get their chance to have a relationship with each other.

Note: You may want to talk to an attorney before you complete an affidavit. An attorney may help arrange genetic tests. An attorney may be able to answer legal questions about paternity and support.

What if we do not sign a paternity affidavit?

You may not want to establish paternity at the time of the child's birth. Or, the biological father may not be there when the child is born. Paternity can be established later by a court or administrative order. Contact the Child Support Recovery Unit (CSRU) in your area or a private attorney for more information about this process.

THE INFORMATION IN THIS BOOKLET DOES NOT TAKE THE PLACE OF LEGAL COUNSEL. FOR LEGAL ADVICE, CONTACT A PRIVATE ATTORNEY OF YOUR CHOICE.

What are the effects, rights and responsibilities of a paternity affidavit?

After the Department of Public Health approves a paternity affidavit:

- The man listed in the affidavit is the legal father of the child.
- For a child born in Iowa, the man's name on the paternity affidavit is added to the birth certificate as a legal father.

- The legal father may be able to take legal steps to get visitation or custody rights. Establishing paternity DOES NOT automatically give a father these rights.
- The legal father has a duty to help support the child financially. If the parents do not live together, the affidavit can be used to get an order for child and medical support. No further action of paternity is required.

What if we signed a paternity affidavit and we were wrong?

Either of you can stop a paternity affidavit by filling out a Recision of Paternity Affidavit form. You must fill out and return it to the Iowa Department of Public Health, Bureau of Health Statistics, before the first of:

- 60 days after the last notarized signature on the paternity affidavit form, or
- Entry of a court order about the child.

The Bureau of Health Statistics charges a fee for entering and filing the Recision of Paternity Affidavit.

When you fill out the form and return it by the deadline, it voids the original paternity affidavit. The man on the paternity affidavit is no longer the legal father. He is no longer listed as the child's father on the birth certificate.

After a paternity affidavit is withdrawn, you cannot fill out another paternity affidavit for the same mother, father, and child. However, the Child Support Recovery Unit or a private attorney may be able to legally establish paternity for this father through another way, such as a court order.

You can get a Recision of Paternity Affidavit form from the Bureau of Health Statistics or your local Child Support Recovery Unit. Return the form and the fee to the Bureau of Health Statistics.
